RUTH LAW LANDS ON GOVERNOR'S ISLAND

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 20.—Alighting on Governor's Island at exactly 9:27:30 this morning, Miss Ruth Law, by her recent performance the world's champion woman aviatrix, brought her Chicago to New York flight to an end. She completed the last lap of her journey—from Binghamton, N. Y., to Governor's Island—at an average speed of about 100 miles an hour. She left Binghamton at 7:12 today.

Flying at a height of about 1,000 feet Miss Law was forced to combat a strong wind all the way from Binghamton. When she landed here there were but a few drops of gasoline left in the tank of her machine despite the fact that she had refilled it at Binghamton.

"I couldn't have gone another thousand yards," she declared as she stepped out of the machine and removed her woolen flyer-cap.

A great crowd was present on Governor's Island to greet the young woman. Major General Leonard Wood, commander of the department of the east, of the army, his two aides, Major Hartman and Major Wood, A. G. Wendell and August Post representing the Aero Club of America, personally congratulated Miss Law as soon as she got out of her machine.

Grouped around on the aviation grounds were scores of young aviation pupils who have not yet obtained their pilot licenses. They gave the young aviatrix a rousing cheer as she brought her machine gracefully to the ground.

"Well done, little girl, we're all proud of you," was General Wood's greeting to Miss Law.

"Thank you, I'm none the worse for wear, as you can see," answered the young woman laughingly.

Miss Law acted as a mail carrier on her last lap. She brought a letter to the New York Rotary Club from Douglas Arthur Teed, a Binghamton artist, and also one to Judge John J. Rooney from Charles T Cunningham.

The flight achievement of Miss Law in covering the distance between Chicago and Hornell makes her first among all of the women aviators of the world and second counting men as her rival. The record for non-ston flights is:

First—French sub-lieut. A. Marchal from Nancy, France, to Cholm, Poland, 812.5 miles.

Second—Miss Ruth Law, from Chicago to Hornell, N. Y., 590 miles

In addition Miss Law holds the American cross-country non-stop record the greatest previous mileage having been made by Victor Carlstrom in his recent flight of 452 miles from Chicago to Erie, Pa.

QUEER MR. SCHNELL FREED FROM CELL

Relatives Learns of His Plight and Comes to His Assistance—Recorder Lang Released Him From Jail.

Sigmund I. Schnell, a Hebrew, late of Kerhonkson, and still later of Kingston, is now in Kearney, N. J., as he was released from the county jail on Sunday by Recorder Lang. It will be remembered that Mr Schnell came to Kingston several weeks ago, and secured lodging at an uptown boarding house. He began to act so queerly that the boarding house keeper ejected him. Mr. Schnell then began to use the telephone to call up the proprietor and make threats as to what he would do for being ejected. It was reported to the police that he had a revolver in his possession and that he was a dangerous man. He was rounded up and arraigned before Recorder Lang last Friday morning. Recorder Lang remanded him to jail for ten days so that a mental examination might be made by physicians to ascertain if Mr. Schnell was insane. The relatives in New Jersey were also notified and the brother-in-law came up to Kingston on Sunday and after a consultation with Recorder Lang the court agreed to release Schnell provided he was taken back to New Jersey. Schnell and his brother-in-law left for New Jersey that afternoon.

Stranger With Mangled Hand.

Saturday evening a stranger giving the name of John Dolan appeared at the city hall and visited police headquarters. He was 54 years old and claimed Newburgh as his home. He had a badly mangled hand which was injured in a threshing machine at Livingston, Columbia county. He said he had no money and he was sent over to the Kingston City Hospital to have his hand treated.

Independence Union to Meet.

At the Hospital.

Saturday William Joy of No. 121 Broadway, was conveyed to the Kingston City Hospital in the city ambulance.

CITY HOSPITAL'S MODERN BUILDING

New Section Recently Added to Institution Contains Almost Every Accessory to Modern Equipment—Many Improvements Afforded for Comfort and Convenience of Patients and Staff.

All through the summer and fall, the people of Kingston, like The Freeman reporter, have undoubtedly been riding up and down Broadway in the Kingston City trolley cars, or by auto, giving little heed to the rapidly growing building close to the rear of the city hospital on Broadway. Even when going up or down town on the Colonial trolley line, the erection of this building, though much more conspicuous from this view point has been so gradual that it has called forth little or no comment. Some inquiries as to the improvements and their nearness to completion, led a reporter of The Freeman to visit the hospital last week in the hope of a more intimate inspection. Through the courtesy of Miss Ryan the superintendent, the visit was made and as a result the inquirer found much to be surprised at and gratified with, as will all who read this article or later visit the hospital.—

The new part of the building—for in due time this will be all one building having every feature of modern equipment and accessory needful in the most modern hospital—is now completed and the separating wall between it and the original building is now being broken through at the various floors. So cleverly has the work been done, that patients in the original building have in no way been disturbed by the building processes going on.

One can already go through the hall from the office, directly to the ground floor of the new structure, where one enters the hospital, in imagination, as an ambulance patient Driving up to the rear of the building the ambulance backs up to the elevator door, and the patient is lifted directly upon a made up hospital bed, easily contained in the elevator, together with two attendants. If it proves to be an emergency surgical case, the patient will be taken, on the bed, directly to the emergency operating room on this ground floor Though small it is completely equipped in accordance with its needs and already one tiny suite of entirely new humanity has entered into this big world by way of its portals. This room was also used during the moving of the main operating room from its old to its new quarters. All rooms in the hospital have one or more windows, the walls are tinted with a soft and restful as well as cheery buff color: and in place of the dust collecting right angle formed by floor and baseboard, the side wall curves into the floor in such a manner as to entirely do away with the slightest accumulation of dust.

In addition to this emergency operating room, and adjoining patient's room, there are on this floor the kitchen, pantries, ice coolers, and nurses' dining room. Surely that kitchen is enough to bring tears of pure joy to the eyes of any real cook! There is a huge coal and gas range with every possible modern contrivance for bettering and expediting the cooking of food. In addition to the pantries for dishes and cooking utensils, dish washing sinks, zinc topped table, etc., there is a sort of butler's pantry through windows of which the made up trays are passed onto running tables ready for serving. With one turn of the body, such trays as are to go to upper floors, or to the dining room below, can be placed into the enclosed dumb waiter, made especially for this purpose. For the help as well as for those who attend the sick as either physician or assistants, there are lockers provided for the clothing worn outside the hospital. In the cooler room, next to the kitchen, are the great ice boxes for meat, for milk, and for miscellaneous food supplies, the same filled from outside. Here, too, is the ice crusher where ice is prepared for ice caps, bags, etc. Shelves are also arranged for the immediate receiving of supplies from the trades people. Next to the elevator is the nurses' dining room, with a very pleasant outlook uptownward. When entirely equipped this will be indeed an attractive room wherein, three times a day, those who care for the sick may meet at meals under as cheerful conditions as possible, quite as it should be. The original dining room is being converted into a more commodious waiting room for patients.

Taking the elevator down, one finds the basement another exceedingly interesting region. Here are commodious pantries for the various food supplies; a dining room for the help, with immediate access to the dumb waiter, and having dish closets, sink, etc. The laundry is equipped with stationary tubs, ironing stove and hot air dryers, etc. The former laundry has been converted into the heater room, where is now installed the most approved heating apparatus and a special heater for water.

The next floor visited was the third, where the private rooms, six in number are located, as well as a fine bedding and linen closet, and small but well equipped slop room. Every one of the private rooms is attractive now and will be still more so when furnished. Of course the two corner rooms are most desirable, and may or may not have access to a private bath, which will have every accessory desired by the most fastidious. Instead of the usual bell call system, with its disadvantage of noise, a fine electric light signal system has been installed. Just outside each room, over the desk of the nurse in that corridor, there will be a colored electric bulb which will be lighted from the inside of the room by means of a long cord attachment reaching to every part of the room convenient to the patient. By means of a push button affair the light will flash in the corridor, when the patient needs the nurse, and it cannot be put out until the nurse enters the room to put it out. These lights will also be arranged in the diet kitchen on this floor, equipped with gas stove, refrigerator, tables, etc., and in such a way as to show which room is needing the nurse. The beds in the rooms will have a clever contrivance by means of which the nurse, single handed may raise or lower the patients, as to head and shoulders, or flex the knees, making the invalid remarkably comfortable as to position. A hospital bassinet, on a level with the hospital bed, shows the trend of modern child welfare ideas. Surely sickness and suffering may here be reduced to their lowest limit of misery and chances of recovery increased to the fullest limit.

Another upward trip in the elevator brings one to the operating and electrical rooms, and here will be found all that surgical or medical science has to offer in the way of remedial means. One room is arranged as a special obstetrical room, although in times of crowding it may be converted into an ordinary private room. There is an X-Ray room, with its adjacent dark room for the developing of the photographic work.

But the one spot dearest of all to the surgeon's heart, is the splendid operating room, with its wonderful side and overhead lighting, etc. Opening off the operating room is the sterilizing room where dressings, utensils and instruments each have their own sterilizing plant, so to speak. Then there is what is known as the doctor's "wash up room," equipped with running water, hot and cold, so arranged that it can be turned on or off with a quick motion of the knee and without one touch of the hand. There are lockers for the clothing of six physicians, and a bathroom with shower, which will be tremendously appreciated by the surgeons, especially after operating during the hottest of our summer days. An etherizing room has also been arranged, but this can in case of crowding be used as an ordinary room, the ether being administered in the operating room as is usually done.

It takes only a minute or two to go, in the elevator from the operating floor to the top floor, which is devoted entirely to two large and charming sun parlors (one for men and one for women) where convalescents may enjoy the great cure of nature, sunshine and fresh air. The outlook from either sun parlor is delightful with the Catskills in the distance, and each of the parlors opens onto a sort of roof garden where the patients may be quite out in the open. The parlors have their windows so arranged that in warm weather they may be opened to such an extent as to make them almost sideless. And the old sun parlor on the ground floor of the original building together with one private room, will be converted into a children's ward, which will be a very real improvement in the hospital. Another small room in this part of the building will be used as the static electrical room.

When completed throughout, the Kingston City Hospital will be all one big, commodious, completely equipped and furnished hospital, entirely up to date in every way, and it will be able to accommodate more than twice the number of patients formerly cared for within its walls.

In these days when conditions of terrible warfare make us wonder if there is any spirit of real Christianity left in the world, it is good to visit such an institution, where the sick or injured of a community may have such marvelous care, either entirely without price or at such cost as they are able to pay. One thing was especially to be noted, and that was the quality and quantity of food served to all but such patients as are on a diet. Everyone in the hospital, patients, nurses, help, all are served the same food, the only difference being in the serving, and the menu for the day when the reporter visited the hospital would have been a credit to any good hotel where wholesome rather than just Frenchy foods are served And there was a sufficient quantity to go for the upbuilding of any patient.

Among the many good things Kingston has to be thankful for, is its city hospital now, and even more so when entirely ready for full occupancy One would like to see the face of Dr. Chandler, who has done so much toward the improving of the hospital, when on his return, he first visits the place!

TWO BOYS RAN AWAY ON SUNDAY

Police Located Them in New York—Both Boys Had Been Charged With Wrecking Hiltebrant's Automobile.

Sunday morning it was reported to police headquarters that Francis Kraus of No. 40 Summer street, and Emil Roehl of No. 338 Foxhall avenue, had ran away. After some quick work on the part of the local department the boys were located in New York city, and the parents notified.

Both boys were arrested last week charged with stealing an automobile owned by S. D. Hiltebrant, from in front of the Y. M. C. A. and going for a joy ride which ended in the machine being run into a telegraph pole and wrecked. The boys were arrested and when arraigned before Recorder Lang in children's court pleaded not guilty and the trial was adjourned to this Wednesday. The other boy who was arrested at the time was Augustus Zimendorf, who has been in trouble before, and has been on probation.

Last week they were paroled in custody of their parents.

Some Deer. "Aged 16 Years."

George Mentz returned to Wallkill on Wednesday from a hunting trip in the Catskill Mountains with a fine deer, which was shot at Slide Mt. Its weight was over 250 pounds and the antlers showed it to be 16 years old. —Walden Citizen Herald.

Tampered With Fire Truck.

Somebody plugged the carburetor on the motor fire truck in Saugerties recently and the authorities have offered a reward of $100 upon conviction of the offender. The fire whistle has been transferred to the Martin Cantine paper mill.

HE SHOT BIGGEST DEER OF SEASON

Philo Powell's First Deer Hunt Resulted in His Bagging the Largest Buck of the Year—It Weighed 260 Pounds.

Philo Powell returned home on Friday from his first deer hunt bringing back with him a buck that tipped the scales at 260 pounds, and had ten points on its antlers, and which is said to be the largest deer shot this season in the Adirondacks. Mr. Powell with William A. Decker, and August Graff spent ten days hunting in the vicinity of Lake Kushaqua, Franklin county, in the northern part of the state.

Mr. Powell is an expert paper box manufacturer and works at his trade in his father's factory on Pine Grove avenue, and during his leisure moments he practices shooting. He was a member of Company M for many years, and the result of his training on the Mutton Hollow range was shown during his hunting trip. Wading through snow fourteen inches deep Mr. Powell set out one day for Mountain Pond Mountain, and as he ploughed through the snow he caught a glimpse of the big buck. He managed to get a little closer to the buck before the animal spotted him. As the buck jerked up his head startled Mr. Powell pulled the trigger of his gun, and the buck dropped.

The buck was conceded the largest shot this season. The next largest deer shot weighed 190 pounds and had eight points on his horns.

Naturally Mr. Powell is somewhat gratified over his success in shooting the buck, especially as this was his first deer hunt. His friends who have seen the deer are trusting they may be invited to a deer steak dinner.

The other members of the party did not bag a deer. Mr. Decker had the misfortune to badly sprain his ankle

Shad Sign of Early Spring.

Presence of the shad in the Hudson is reported by fishermen along the river near Dobbs Ferry and is taken as an indication of an early spring. One fisherman asserts that similar catches were made 30 years ago and that navigation never closed during the winter season that followed.

To Take Position in Bank.

Herbert Hall has resigned as cashier of the Wallkill Bank at Wallkill to accept a position in the Rondout Savings Bank, resignation to take effect December first.

MAKING PROGRESS ON BRIDGE PIERS

Contractor Utilizing Favorable Weather Conditions to Utmost—To Drive Long Piles as Part of Foundation for Central Support on Highway Structure Over the Rondout.

The fine weather thus far this fall has been utilized to the utmost by the H. K. Corbin Company, contractors for the foundations of the state highway bridge over the Rondout creek, and a force of forty men is now at work excavating rock on the south shore and building forms for the casting of concrete piles to be used on the central pier on the island. Prospects point to a completion of this contract by the middle of next summer. The contract which approximates $60,000 calls for 6,000 yards of concrete for the foundations for the two towers.

The foundation on the town of Esopus side will go down about 15 feet below the high tide mark to bed rock. That excavation will soon be completed and the concrete work will be rushed in an effort to get it set before extreme cold weather sets in. This foundation upon which the south tower will rest will be 31 by 60 feet carried up two feet above the high tide mark. On top of this the foundation changes to what is known as a concrete I beam, the concrete form being in the shape of a cross section of an I laid flat in which shape it goes up 23½ feet making the structure covered in this contract 25½ feet above high tide level. The outside measurements on this part of the pier are 29 by 58 feet and on top of this the tower to come in the later contract, will be placed.

South of this tower will be two other towers, yet to be contracted, placed at equal intervals in the space of 200 feet to the beginning of the walls of the approach to the bridge proper. These latter walls will be parallel and between them will be an earth fill extending back to the top of the cliffs. A cut will be necessary on that side to meet the road level beyond.

Piles 50 Feet Down.

The central foundation pier will rest upon an elaborate system of piles driven fifty feet into the ground from the floor of an excavation 14 feet deep. This central pier will be 60 by 87 feet and built of concrete heavily reinforced with steel.

The concrete piles for which forms are now being made by the carpenters will not be placed until next spring as a 30 days' test is required and it is probable that the frost will be in the ground before they can be placed. They will be built through the winter by means of steam heat to prevent any danger of freezing. These piles are two feet by one and twenty-five feet in length. They will be driven down around the central pier to a point four feet below high tide level and will form a coffer dam for the excavating to be carried to a depth of 14 feet and will remain after the central pier is built as a permanent part of the foundation.

A novel idea in driving the 50 foot wooden piles is shown in the blue prints, it being planned to have these battered down in opposite directions in alternate rows. To the layman it might be clearer to say that the word batter means to drive down on a bias and the resultant effect is to have these long piles placed something in the shape of a letter x, one set slanting toward the Kingston side and the other in the opposite direction. The theory is that in this way the strain of the two big spans of steel would be taken up to better advantage than if the piles were driven home upright.

Imagine a hole in the ground 14 feet deep and 60 feet wide by 80 feet in length, then picture driving a number of telegraph poles 50 feet long, small end downward, into the ground their full length from the floor of the excavation and some idea may be obtained of the labor attendant to this job. The central pier, as called for in the present contract, will resemble in general outline the pier of the Esopus shore and will stand 25½ feet above the high tide mark. On top of these foundations will rest the towers of the superstructure.

Other Foundations Later.

The pier for the Kingston side is not covered in the present contract, the policy being to get these two foundations which were involved with water out of the way at the outset. The State Highway Department is likely to prepare estimates on the remainder of the work this winter to advertise in the spring and thus continue the good start already made without any prolonged break.

It is said that this is the greatest bridge for purely highway purposes in the state highway system. It is of the type known as the two span steel arch bridge but the roadway, as shown in the photographs, is carried at a point half way down the arcs of the span. The clearance over the creek channel is 85 feet as required by the federal government which has jurisdiction over the Rondout as far as the dam at Eddyville.

David J. Shaw is the engineer in charge for the state and his assistants are Bernard Roche and Chauncy M. Lane, inspectors. W. R. Richard is the superintendent for the Corbin Company which expects to keep its present force of forty-men busy all winter if possible.

FORTY-TWO BOYS BEFORE RECORDER

Saturday Was Recorder Lang's Busy Day—Boys of All Sizes, Ages and Colors Before Him—Mostly Probationers.

Recorder Lang held a busy day in children's court on Saturday at the city hall, and all together forty-two boys appeared before him, the larger part being boys on probation.

Hallowe'en night fourteen boys were mixed up in stealing a wagon owned by G. W. Parish of Hasbrouck avenue. The wagon was found later damaged to the extent of $13.65 Saturday the boys appeared before Recorder Lang and were assessed 98 cents each to pay for the damage

A week ago Sunday night six boys raised a rumpus at the dance held in the Hebrew Free School, and were later notified to appear before Recorder Lang. The case was held open until Saturday afternoon when all six boys were fined $1 each which they paid.

The other boys who appeared before Recorder Lang were boys who have been placed on probation for various reasons, and who report every week.

ANNUAL CROSS COUNTRY RUN

Y. M. C. A. Will Revive Annual Event Thanksgiving Day—Bowling League Notes—Other Activities.

The Y. M. C. A. this year is planning to revive the annual cross country run on Thanksgiving Day for the grammar school boys, and already six entries have been received. The run this year will be limited to grammar school boys and boys in the parochial schools of the city. Full details may be obtained from Physical Director Godfrey at the Y. M. C. A. It is not necessary to be a member of the Y. M. C. A. to take part in the run. A small entry fee will be charged, and medals will be awarded the winners.

Arrangments are being made by Physical Director Godfrey to organize a city bowling league. The Y. M. C. A. will be represented by two teams and St. Peter's Church by two teams. It is expected that an effort will be made to interest the Elks. Mr. Godfrey would like to have at least six teams in the league, and if plans can be made the alleys of the association, at the St. Peter's School and the Elks Club will be used.

Plans are underway to organize a junior basketball league. The Emeralds have entered and a team from the employed boys class will be formed. It needs four more teams to round out the league. Members of teams desiring to enter the league do not have to be members of the association.

Tuesday evening another game will be rolled in the Y. M. C. A. Church Bowling League when the teams of the Rondout Presbyterian Church and Temple Emanuel will meet on the association alleys.

REASON FOR SCORCHING.

Mr. Snyder Rushes Blazing Car to Fire House for Help.

Chauncey Snyder's Cadillac touring car caught fire where the top of the car was folded back while Mr. Snyder was passing through Elmendorf street about two o'clock this morning. The origin of the fire is unknown but it is probable that it started from a spark from a cigar or cigarette which had lodged in the canvas and leather. A passenger in the rear seat was asleep. Mr. Snyder saw the reflection of the flames in the wind shield when he turned into Broadway and tried to smother the fire with a blanket Failing in this, he made a record-breaking trip to the Wiltwyck Hose House on Fair street, where the fire was extinguished with chemcals. The leather and part of the rear of the machine, in addition to the top, were damaged.

A Corner at the Fair.

The girls of the Whatsoever Band will have charge of a unique corner at the Wurts street Presbyterian Fair which opens to-morrow noon. Knowing how fond children are of flowers and how interested in birds' nests, an oriole's nest of unusual dimensions has been secured, filled to overflowing with eggs. It is hung among the flower laden branches of a forsythia bush, and the brilliant orioles hover about it. The mysterious eggs from the nest and also the wonderful blossoms from the tree will be for sale.

Profits of the Dance.

The recent dance at St. Mary's Hall for the purpose of raising funds for the purchase of books for the City Library netted $286. The ladies in charge were Mrs. Everett Fowler and Mrs. Gordon Rust.

GOOD EATING.

A quick and delicious salad dressing is made as follows: Rub to a paste the yolks of three hard-cooked eggs and two tablespoonfuls of olive oil; add salt, paprika and white pepper to taste, then add slowly two tablespoonfuls of good vinegar; add gradually half a cupful of cream, and when well mixed beat it two minutes with an egg beater; set on the ice until thoroughly chilled; this is particularly good for potato or any vegetable salad.

Tongue is recommended to be used in place of suet in mince pies; then they may be served cold and are equally as good as hot.

French fried potatoes, if rolled in cornmeal before frying will be found much improved.

When boiling ham add a few cloves and whatever canned fruit juice is at hand, such as peach, pear, quince, apricot or the juice from pickled peaches or pears.

Patty shells seasoned with grated cheese make a delicious change from the plain, everyday kind.

New York Sandwich.—With three tablespoonfuls of finely minced ham blend two tablespoonfuls of finely minced onion. Add one well-beaten egg, and when well mixed, drop by spoonfuls into hot drippings; pat in shape, and when delicately brown on one side, turn and saute on the other, then place between slices of bread, buttered and cut in sandwich form. Serve on lettuce.

Pecan Pralines.—Boil together two cupfuls of brown sugar, a quarter of a cupful of boiling water, until thick, then add four tablespoonfuls of butter and cook five minutes; remove from the stove, add a cupful of pecans and beat for one minute, or until thick enough to drop by spoonfuls on a buttered pan.

Apple Pudding.—Put layers of buttered toast in a baking dish, cover with chopped apple, a little sugar and cinnamon, then another layer of toast, buttered. Pour over a custard, using a pint of milk and two eggs, a little salt and sugar. Bake until the custard is set.

News From the Front.

Cards have been received in this city from William Jordan, a former member of Company M, and now a member of the Fourth Field Hospital Corps, stationed at McAllen, Texas. Mr. Jordan went to Texas with Captain Cranston's hospital corps early in the fall. One card was mailed at McAllen on November 16 and states that the weather was very cold and snowy. In spite of the severe weather Mr. Jordan is enjoying the trip and is in the best of health. In making the trip south Jordan states that the soldier boys passed through the corn, cotton and wheat belts. No mention is made of any desire or expectation to return home.

Have Birth in Forest Fires.

So hard is the cone of a pine in the western forests of America that the imprisoned seeds cannot be propagated in the ordinary way. The best way is to burn the cone over a hot fire until it bursts, when the seeds escape. When forest fires sweep the country these pine cones have their chance, and from them new trees grow.

GREATER KINGSTON WORK BEGUN TODAY

American City Bureau Opens Headquarters in Central Section of City and Preliminary Organization for Chamber of Commerce Expansion is Started.

The expansion campaign of the Chamber of Commerce under the direction of the American City Bureau of New York is on.

James O. Stevenson, field secretary, arrived in Kingston Sunday night and this morning took charge of the preliminary work. Headquarters are being established on Broadway in a central section of the city and a clerical force is being recruited.

Mr. Stevenson is enthusiastic at the prospects presented for an enlarged sphere of usefulnss for the Chamber of Commerce and hopes to make Kingston the most successful of the dozen or more organizations the Bureau has effected in this state. The goal of the campaign is 500 members for the Chamber of Commerce with dues at $25 a year, making possible an annual revenue of $12,500 to be used to carry out a definite program of civic, commercial and industrial expansion on a scale never before attempted in this community.

That results would be achieved in this movement, Mr. Stevenson has not the slightest doubt. He said:

"The time has now arrived when every city must have a live, vigorous organization of its business men if for no other reason than self-protection. Competition between cities is becoming more and more intense and especially after the close of the war will be this be true of all eastern cities.

"Within the past three years more than fifty up-to-date Chambers of Commerce have been organized in territory where Kingston must compete for business. Kingston can no longer remain passive to this situation and the present movement will be her answer to the challenge."

Mr. Stevenson will be followed shortly by two other representatives of the American City Bureau and ten days later Lucius E. Wilson, the chief campaign director of the Bureau, will come here to take personal charge of the campaign.

Kingston's campaign will be compared with simlar efforts in Olean, Lookport, Ithaca and Middletown. In the latter city the campaign concluded two weeks ago resulted in 381 memberships.

Lapala to Have R. F. D.

The fourth assistant postmaster general has issued instructions to Postmaster Deyo to extend Rural Delivery Route No. 3 through Marbletown to include Lomontville and the section known as the Lapala district. The change will take effect December 1. It is said that the new service will be greatly appreciated by residents of the new territory to be served as since the construction of the New York city reservoir they have been obliged to go several miles for their mail now being received at Brown's Station, Lomontville or Spillway. Carrier Henry A. Picken, who has this route, will be obliged to cover more than 30 miles under the new dispensation, his present day's round being 24 miles.

SHRINERS TO HOLD ANNUAL DANCE

The Kingston Shriners' Association has secured the use of the armory for its annual dance which will be given on Wednesday evening, January 17.

Arrangements are being made for several special features which will be announced later. It is expected that the Arab Patrol of Cyprus Temple of Albany, numbering between thirty and forty men, will come here for the purpose of giving an exhibition drill in full regalia, which is very elaborate. Arrangements also are being made for the presence of a well known orchestra.

The Shriners' dance is an event to which all dancers look forward with pleasure and there is no doubt that the 1917 dance will be well patronized.

A PINE HILL MORTGAGE.

Interesting Questions Arise in a Suit To Foreclose It.

Several interesting questions were presented to Judge Hasbrouck on Saturday in the case of Andrew D. Hill against Robert F. Thompson and others in which a motion was made by Joseph M. Fowler to open a default in mortgage foreclosure proceedings and to allow his client, Mrs. Lulu Rappleyea, to interpose an answer.

The property covered by the mortgage sought to be foreclosed by Mr. Hill is situated at Pine Hill. Mrs. Rappleyea is the owner of an undivided one-half interest. The mortgage was given in 1909 by Mrs. Louisa Thompson, the mother of Mrs. Rappleyea, to her brother, Daniel Huggins, for $800, and was payable in five years. Mrs. Rappleyea claims the mortgage had no valid inception and was not given for consideration, and that a satisfaction piece was executed of whose existence she was told by her mother, and that she now has two witnesses who saw the satisfaction piece. The mortgage came to Mr. Hill through Robert F. Thompson, her half-brother, who was administrator of their mother's estate, through Seth Jocelyn, to whom Thompson assigned it, but she claims it was not purchased by Mr. Hill for full and valid consideration but that Thompson was discharging an obligation in giving it. Mr. Jocelyn assigned it to Mr. Hill.

Mrs Rappleyea explains her failure to appear in the case previously by her belief that the suit was to be defended by Mrs. David Winter of Pine Hill, who was the owner of a judgment against Mrs. Thompson for $250, which she had purchased from the Griffin Corners National Bank. Mrs. Rappleyea was informed that Mrs. Winter would defend the foreclosure suit by reason of her interest on account of that judgment, and so did not interpose any answer herself. Mrs. Winter did serve an answer but did not defend, and a judgment of foreclosure and sale recently was granted.

In opposition to the application, Judge Betts, who appeared for Andrew D. Hill, presented Mr. Hill's affidavit stating that he had purchased the mortgage from Seth Jocelyn for $500. The assignment by Huggins to Jocelyn and from Jocelyn to him contain a covenant that the $800 is due and unpaid. In Mr. Hill's judgment, the property is worth $1,000, but the taxes have been unpaid for two years, the buildings are dilapidated, and there are two previous mortgages for $450, so that the equity of redemption above the amount of his mortgage has no value. An affidavit of Corporation Counsel William D. Brinnier recited that a judgment for $250 had been recovered by the First National Bank of Griffin Corners against Robert F. Thompson and had been assigned to Susie Winter, who in turn assigned it to him.

Judge Betts also presented an affidavit of Robert F. Thompson reciting that he is a half-brother of Mrs. Rappleyea but that she had not lived with her mother in thirty years while he lived nearby and saw her frequently. His mother, he says, frequently told him that her brother, Daniel Huggins, had advanced money to her, and that the satisfaction piece of the mortgage had been given to be placed on record in case she survived Huggins, who was a man of means, but in the event of her prior death the satisfaction piece was to be returned. After the death of his mother, he returned the satisfaction pieces to Huggins and it was destroyed. The amount of his mother's personal estate was $81. Funeral expenses amounted to $80 and other claims against the estate have been filed, including a claim presented by Jerome Rappleyea, husband of Lulu Rappleyea, for $200 for butter, eggs and meat. Mr. Thompson recites the two prior mortgages for $450, that there are several judgments against his mother and that his attorney, County Attorney John W. Eckert, has not been paid for his services in connection with the estate.

An affidavit of Henry A. Cole of Pine Hill recited that he had taken the acknowledgment of Huggins to a paper, and Huggins had said he wanted things fixed so that if he died first any indebtedness between him and his sister should be cancelled.

A paper found among Mrs. Thompson's effects also was produced. It was endorsed, "My deal with Dan—Louisa," and contained a memoranda of $350 cash and $450 certificate of deposit, total $800. Judge Hasbrouck was asked to compare the signature with that of Mrs. Thompson to several notes and legal instruments.

Mr. Fowler, in reply, said that the destruction of the satisfaction piece by Thompson was one thing but the destruction by Huggins was quite another matter, and it was important to learn, if possible, who destroyed that paper. He produced a letter written by Huggins to Lulu and Jerome Rappleyea stating: "I never heard if Robert settled with you and with Dave Winter."

Judge Hasbrouck suggested that it would be a good thing to get an affidavit from Huggins, who he was told was a resident of New Jersey. County Attorney Eckert said he doubted whether Huggins would make any affidavit for either side, and to Judge Hasbrouck's suggestion that a commission be issued to take his testimony, said that all parties were anxious to save expense.

Judge Hasbrouck reserved decision.

Transplanting Kidneys.

The transplanting of kidneys has been done by Enderlen, Borst and Unger. Unger has succeeded in removing both kidneys from a bulldog and immediately substituting the kidneys of a fox terrier. The new kidneys took up their function promptly and the dog seemed to suffer little from the shock. In Berlin a diseased kidney was removed from a young woman and the kidney of an anthropoid ape substituted successfully.

The Living-Room

THE living-room is the heart of the home—the center of family life and fellowship. In many homes the living-room is also the library, the sewing-room, nursery and drawing-room.

The many uses to which the furniture is subjected makes it imperative that it be substantial. At the same time it must be artistic to convey the true atmosphere of your home.

For this purpose we earnestly recommend Berkey & Gay Knoleworth Furniture in the Newby finish. So many customers have expressed pleasure with it, that we are sure of its utility and worth.

To new home-makers we extend our good wishes and an invitation to visit our display rooms.

IN OUR great-great-grandfathers' time many New England families had a cask of rum in the cellar.

It was freely offered to guests (except children) and freely partaken of, even as coffee is today.

This old-time custom gradually passed out of existence, for our forefathers recognized it was harmful.

Another old-time custom—coffee drinking—is slowly passing in the same fashion and for the same reason.

The abandonment of coffee drinking is made easy nowadays by the use of Instant Postum, the pure cereal beverage with the coffee-like taste.

Unlike coffee, this purely American table drink contains no "caffeine" or other harmful substance.

Postum is now used daily in tens of thousands of the best of American homes where reason rules and health is valued.

"Kidding" the Anglers.

Two recently converted neophytes to the gentle art of angling, on the way to the stream where they proposed to try their luck, paused in astonishment at the sight of a small urchin staggering under the burden of a huge fish, almost as large as himself. Approaching him, the stout member said: "Good gracious, boy! That's a good catch!" The youngster slowly sized him up from his conspicuously new shoes to the latest style of "Alpine" hat which adorned his head, spat disgustedly, and said: "Aw, this ain't the catch, it's the bait!"

KINGSTON, N. Y., NOV. 20, 1916.

Quantities of criticism have been launched at Mr. Hughes for delaying in sending to Mr. Wilson the congratulatory message which custom requires. This usage seems to be based upon the theory that politics is a kind of game in which the loser should be a "good sport." It is true that prizefighters shake hands before the beginning of their performance, but that is because one of the contestants is likely to be incapacitated for such action at the close; also there is not much hugging and kissing after hotly contested baseball and football games; still, in the more refined sports, such as chess and yachting, it is considered very handsome of the loser to offer his felicitations. Judging from what we hear and read, it is the general opinion that political campaigns come under the last-named class. Now, general opinion is a very good thing to consider, but in a free country it is not absolutely binding upon individual conduct. It is permissible to view the proposition from quite another angle.

In the case of a campaign for town and county offices, in which no important principle is involved—the voters making their choice out of personal liking for one man or the other—it seems to be a nice thing for the loser to express moderate joy over his rival's triumph. Such action eases the social strain and puts local relations back where they were before the friendly contest began. The sooner dead and unimportant local issues are buried in unmarked graves the better. But are such thoughts appropriate to the close of a national campaign such as we have just had? It is well known that Mr. Hughes has repeatedly and fervently charged President Wilson with betraying the interests of our country. We think he was right. Anyway, he must have believed himself right, unless the public opinion of his character for sincerity is grotesquely wrong. This being so, how can he be a patriot congratulate the man he has denounced? Some people evidently think this is his duty, but they would doubtless agree also that King George was exceedingly remiss in not sending congratulations to George Washington after the Revolutionary war, and the Pope in not congratulating Luther on the success of the Reformation.

If we thought politics to be a mere game, we should be ashamed to have The Freeman called a Republican paper, any more than a National League or an American League paper. We should put all political news in our sporting column. On the contrary, we believe that the issues for which we fought in the campaign were real things, and that thinking citizens should continue to battle for them during the next four years or for as many years as may be necessary until this year's popular verdict shall be reversed. The standard which Charles E. Hughes bore during the campaign is still waving, although temporarily at halfmast. Nothing is ever settled until it is settled right.

Now that the necessity for campaign claims has gone by it is interesting to note that corroboration is being furnished by Democratic authorities of the statements made by Republicans as to faultiness of the rural credits law for which so much was claimed before election. Representative Caraway of Arkansas, who was one of the sponsors for the farm loan act, in speaking before a gathering of Farm Mortgage Bankers at Memphis, stated that 'the present law was a compromise and undoubtedly subject to important amendments before it could be worked out satisfactorily." This is in line with Republican criticism of the measure, whose numerous complications and red tape are barriers to the end sought to be reached and leave the farmer in the same condition as formerly, it being easier for him to deal with private loaning agencies rather than to attempt the involved procedure necessary to get a government loan up to fifty per cent of the value of the property to be mortgaged. Congressman Caraway's comment speaks volumes. It shows that the Wilson administration in endeavoring to meet the alleged public demand for improved rural credits went but half way and left the situation in such shape as to make future amendments imperative. The same is true of other of its legislative achievements for which so much was claimed—before election.

ROOSA OF ST. REMY.

Motion to Punish Him for Failing to Pay Alimony.

Judge Hasbrouck on Saturday reserved decision on a motion to punish John M. Roosa of St. Remy for contempt of court for failure to pay alimony and counsel fee in the suit for separation brought against him by his wife, Anna Roosa. The suit is based on allegations of cruel treatment and failure to provide her with anything to eat. Mrs. Roosa alleging that her husband brings home only sufficient food for himself, and that she is compelled to work in a factory to secure money with which to buy supplies for herself and the children. Corporation Counsel William D. Brinnier, counsel for Mrs. Roosa, said he did not think so much about the counsel fee due him as he did about the alimony, and he claimed that Roosa could raise the money if he would sell his horse and wagon, which he used merely for riding around the county. Judge Stephan, who appeared for Roosa, said that his client used the horse and wagon in his business and he could not sell them because they were already mortgaged. Roosa, he said, was very deaf and that fact made it difficult for him to comprehend the nature of the action and proceedings, but he expected Roosa's brother would be able to explain matters fully. Judge Hasbrouck said that if Roosa could not pay the full amount allowed, he ought to be willing to pay according to his capacity. Time was granted in which affidavits may be filed and decision was reserved.

What is style in clothes?

YOU want the clothes you wear to be stylish. "Wha-da-ya mean stylish?" The chances are, you couldn't answer that very accurately. In that respect, you're just like most of the rest of us.

Style is one of the commonest words used in speaking about things to wear, and yet it has never been given a good definition. Style is intangible, but real; like the scent of a rose or the beauty of a sunset, you know it's there and yet you cant describe it.

But it's one of the most important things about your clothes; you feel that you must have it, even when you cant tell just what it is. And because it is so real and yet so elusive of definition, lots of men think they get it, when they dont.

The way to decide the question is to go to somebody who knows.

Hart Schaffner & Marx

are style creators; and that's one of the reason why we put our confidence in their goods; and why you should. The styles they produce are right; the concern is big enough to have the best sources of information on this matter, and to employ the most competent and artistic designers in the country.

When you buy these clothes; it's like getting a certified check; you know it's right.

Soliloquy of a Suburbanite.

The cold gray dawn of a chill November morn, warns we that Indian summer has quit. The frost is on the "punkin" and the fodder's is the barn. The smell of burning leaves is in the air and the farmer smokes his evening pipe by the light of the chimney fire. Election is over and what have we gained? Four years more of W. W., if you know what that means. Candidates have been around giving us handshakes and "How's the folks" as usual. But what good is a handshake unless he slips you a coin or a bill—a protective tariff, and protection for American citizens at home and abroad is but a memory. Hard times are coming again, believe me; wait till you see. Prosperity now? Oh yes, while the rest of the world is fighting, we are kept hustling to make guns and ammunition, but when the last gun is fired, that bubble will burst. What has become of our boasted civilization? What about the intelligence and patriotism of the average American voter? What a blundering, wretched choice has been made and what a golden opportunity lost, to honor the name of Lincoln and renew allegiance to the party that elected him. Listen, the American people instead of doing their plain patriotic duty in their choice of rulers, like a pack of idiotic malcontents, they choose rather to suffer the ills of maladministration and sectional hate in order to pay off old scores. The G. O. P. is paying a penalty for the enemies she has made. She made irreconcilible enemies when the south was whipped to a frazzle fifty years ago, hence, the solid south. She made enemies when she refused to let a mob of frenzied bolters rule the convention of 1912; hence the flop in California.

These old sores are slow in healing. But we have only to wait four years more, and then they will tumble over one another in a rush to get under cover of Republican rule again. Don't think for a moment that it was the popularity of Wilson or a vindication of his policy that elected him, and don't blame Hughes for our defeat, for he made a gallant fight. Well, Thanksgiving is coming soon, and turkeys begin to roost high—none but the wealthy can pay the price. It will be corned beef and cabbage for me and mine. What have I to be thankful for? But we'll wait for 1920 and live in hope, if we don't die in despair.

OUR COUNTY FAIRS

Their Origin Traced to Habits of Primitive Man.

BORN IN THE DAYS OF BARTER.

These Exhibitions, Typical of Their Times, Ever New, Yet as Old as India, Have Been Popular Among All Peoples and In Every Clime.

The county fair is an institution as old as India and as new as today. If anybody supposes that manufacturing has dulled the rustic flavor of the New England fair let him go to a New England fair and learn his mistake.

The fair grounds are thronged with the characters of a rural drama multiplied by 5,000. They have come in every vehicle from touring car to democrat wagon—the whole family, from dim eyed grandmother to bright eyed baby. The old folks are engrossed in prize stock, the young folks in one another. Any one who cannot see a hundred country courtships at a county fair must be blind.

Did any one suppose the fair had lost the luster of its pristine glory? All wrong. It is bigger and better than ever. The cows are sleeker, the bulls more Romanly majestic, the stallions prouder, the hogs fatter, the sheep shaggier. The farm machinery grows more intricate and fascinating. The motorcar does not seem to have robbed horse racing of its thrills any more than the human race seems to tire of plugging baseballs at the kinky skull of "the Abyssinian marvel."

In the midst of all this excitement it suddenly dawns on one that the human race never tires of fairs. They are as old as human society. The fair is the place where primitive man came to swap wheat for furs, dried dates for woven cloth. The fair is the blossom of a commercial society. It is the bartering place between men who produce different sorts of commodities. In Russia the huge fairs are the big business days of the year. In parts of northern Asia the fair is the only market.

Oddly enough, religion and commerce have always gone hand in hand at the fair. The Olympic games of ancient Greece were almost as much a commercial as a religious event. In ancient Italy the annual assembly at the temple of Voltumna was as much fair as feast. The temple of Jerusalem it of on one occasion proved to have become almost as much a place of barter and sale as a house of worship.

In medieval Europe the king granted to the abbots, bishops and other ecclesiastical dignitaries the right to manage the fairs and to exact tolls from the trade, which amounted to a temporary monopoly. When the bishop of Winchester held his fair in England, for example, everybody else was obliged to shut up shop and trade at remains in the German word for fair, "messe" and in the Brittany word "kirmiss," or "church mass."

No one seems to know whether people first came together to worship and then decided to trade or whether they came together to trade and then decided to worship.

The great medieval fairs were swept away in the eighteenth century—in France by the revolution, which abolished such ecclesiastical monopolies, while in England the fairs were abolished by an odd combination of good roads and bad morals. The good roads made intercommunication easier, and the low moral tone of the fairs brought them into disrepute.

Yet the fair is a mirror of the society which produces it. Compare the Olympic games with a county fair. The chariot race becomes the trotting race, the rhapsodist chanting the Homeric poems becomes the barker bawling the ballyhoo; the statues of Phidias become the exhibition of fancy needlework; the rite of human sacrifice (supposing there is one) becomes the balloon ascension and parachute jump or the aviator looping the loop, and the stately dramas of Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides become the midway sideshows of "Glimpses in the Harem."

But we can do better than that. The germ cell of the modern city is the fair. When John Bunyan resolved to pillory British society in "Pilgrim's Progress" he invented "Vanity Fair." More than a century later, when Thackeray tackled the same job in one of the greatest of English novels, he borrowed that title from Bunyan.

Literature abounds in fairs. The opera without a "kirmiss" scene is only half an opera. The reason is that the fair is a miniature of human society: it is to the great city as a potted plant is to a tree.

So we have our food fairs, trade fairs and every few years our world fairs. Fairs in one form or another human society will continue to have for the simple reason that from the holy fairs of India to the county fair of the United States the fair is human society.—Boston Globe.

Joyous Tidings.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "I have good news."

"What is it?"

"The bank sent me word that my account is overdrawn. I looked in the dictionary book and found that 'overdrawn' is the same as 'exaggerated.'"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

He who believes in nobody knows that he himself is not to be trusted.—Amelia B.

Her Reasoning.

Mr. Binks—"It's very kind of you, Maria, but I'd rather buy my cigars myself. Seven for a quarter is rather too cheap!" Mrs. Binks—"I know it's cheap, but I thought there must be at least one good one in the seven."

NATURE'S FLIERS.

Aviators Make a Poor Showing When Compared With Birds.

Although of recent years aviation has made such tremendous strides, the feats of present day aviators cannot be compared with those of nature's flyers—the birds. In speed, endurance, lifting and sighting power birds beat aviators every time.

A common swallow, for instance, can travel in the air at the rate of 120 miles an hour. The vulture when swooping on its prey cuts through the atmosphere at nearly 150 miles an hour.

The fastest an aeroplane has ever traveled is 108 miles an hour, and this speed was only obtained by building a freak machine, dangerous to handle.

Then, again, birds can fly for twenty-four hours at a stretch without descending, even in boisterous weather.

After eight or nine hours' continual flying an aviator is wearied both mentally and bodily, and if he has had strong winds to fight he is often in a state of collapse.

At a height of 10,000 feet the earth in detail is most difficult for an aviator to see, and it is only with strong glasses that he can discern even large buildings and rivers. But, although at high altitudes, hawks and kites can spy tiny lizards and field mice on the earth, for their sighting powers are twenty times stronger than those of aviators.—London Globe.

SPRAINED ANKLES.

They Are, as a Rule, Accompanied by Broken Bones.

The first step in the treatment of a sprained ankle should be a carefully taken X ray photograph, according to Dr. S. Bernard Rosenzweig in the New York Medical Journal, for the reason that simple sprains without fractures of the bones are rare. And the treatment of a break is different from that of a sprain.

The simple sprain is treated with movement and massage. The ankle is soaked for fifteen or twenty minutes in water as hot as can be borne. This is followed by massage and passive movements, then alternate hot and cold douches, and a loose dressing of lead and opium wash is applied. This is carried out twice a day, and after three days the patient is made to move his own ankle. This is now strapped for support, and the patient is advised to walk about, wearing a high laced s and carrying a stick.

If a bone be broken the ankle is immobilized with a heavy adhesive dressing or a light plaster cast. At the end of a week massage, baking and movement are given, and not until after this is the patient allowed to try to walk.

Love and a Ring.

The story of one woman's pride and devotion comes out of a jeweler's shop. A young man bought an engagement ring. Apparently he was an impecunious young man. At any rate he ordered an imperfect diamond. In less than a week his fiancee called at the shop alone.

"Is this a flawless diamond?" she

She got it.

"I thought so," she said. "Poor fellow! I don't blame him. He did the best he could. I don't care for myself, but I have friends who are good judges of diamonds, and it would nearly kill me for them to find out that he gave me a cheap ring. Will you take this stone out and replace it with a first class diamond? He will never know the difference. I will pay the bill."

The substitution was effected, and that young woman is now proudly showing her ring.—New York Times.

Didn't Give Him the Chance.

Schopenhauer, when staying in Geneva, used to go every day to a table d'hote at which now and then appeared other distinguished visitors. Once Lady Byron sat next to him.

"Doctor," said the host after she had left, with a twinkle in his eye—"doctor, do you know who sat next to you at the table today? It was Lady Byron."

"Why the deuce did you not tell me this before?" replied Schopenhauer. "I should have liked to be rude to her."

"That was what I feared," said the host, "and for that reason I kept it quiet."

JOSEPHUS DANIELS
©CLINEDINST, WASH D.C.

SECRETARY DANIELS MAY RESIGN.

Washington, Nov. 20—According to gossip in political circlees here, Secretary Daniels will resign from the navy portfolio as soon as President Wilson begins his second term. It is said that the Secretary feels that he has been vindicated by the re-election of President Wilson, and that he now wishes to retire to conduct his newspaper.

Vegetables in Tudors' Time.

What did people eat before they had the potato as a staple article of diet? Apparently they had most of the vegetables that we have now. Of Londoners in the time of the Tudors, Sir Walter Besant tells us that they ate lettuce as a separate dish before the meat, used turnip leaves as a salad and roasted the turnip itself in wood ashes. Horseradish and carrots were known to them, and capers were served boiled in oil or vinegar. Cucumbers, radishes, parsnips and cabbages also figured at the Tudor meal table, for which, by the way, they boiled their oysters and spread their beef with honey. It would be fun in these days to eat—or refuse—a Tudor meal.—London Chronicle.

Struggle For Expression.

There is a certain hardship in each age's struggle to attain expression against the overwhelming mass of expression already in existence. In no other field of human effort does the practitioner have to contend with ghosts. A living general does not have to array his battalions against Caesar or Hannibal or Napoleon. A living athlete does not go up against Heracles or Milo. But a book or picture or musical composition has to fight not only against its natural rivals of the present, but against all that has been preserved from the past.—Charles Leonard Moore.

HER BOSOM FRIEND

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

"Eunice," said Mrs. Tisdale to her bosom friend, "the doctor has ordered me to spend the winter in a warm climate. Ralph can't possibly go with me. We are dependent on his salary for a living, and if he gives up his position we will be impoverished. I had hoped, dear, to have you go with me, but you know that can't be. And since you must stay here I wish you to help look after Ralph's comfort."

One not knowing the circumstances under which this was spoken would naturally suppose it to mean exactly what it appeared to mean. Mrs. Tisdale meant something else.

There are cases where either a husband or a wife will have a bosom friend whose influence goes to make trouble. Eunice Cowles was such a friend to Edith Tisdale. If Ralph proposed anything, Edith would withhold her consent till she had consulted Eunice. If Ralph returned from business in the evening tired and anxious for a quet dinner and rest with his wife, he was likely to find that she had gone off with Eunice. Besides this, there was the feeling that he was always playing second to Eunice's first.

Mrs. Tisdale departed, leaving her husband in the care of her bosom friend. What she meant by looking after his comfort was that Eunice was to see that no woman got hold of him during her absence. She trusted Eunice implicitly, and she was the only woman with whom she considered her husband would be safe.

"Now, dear," she said to him before leaving, "when you feel lonely in the evening go round to Eunice's. She has promised me to look after you and will help you through the period of my absence."

Ralph made no reply to this. His wife did not see the frown on his face but if she had seen it it would have made no difference. She knew that her husband was averse to her friend but believed his aversion to result from the fact that he was blind to Eunice's nobility of character. Edith loved him, but she did not place him on that lofty pedestal on which she had placed Eunice.

Eunice gave Ralph to understand that the latchstring was always out for him. At first he showed no disposition to avail himself of the offer, spending his evenings either with his intimate friends or at home reading. But one evening he appeared at Eunice's home, manifesting a cordiality that he had not been accustomed to show before. A week later he called again and asked her to go out with him to an evening's entertainment.

Eunice wrote Edith that Ralph had changed toward her. Before he had been left alone she had appeared to be scarcely welcome at his home, but now he went to see her often of his own accord and was very companionable. To this Edith replied, "Heaven grant, dear, that his eyes have been opened to your many virtues."

As the winter wore on friends and acquaintances of this trio began to notice the intimacy existing between Ralph Tisdale and Eunice Cowles. Then they began to talk. One day Edith received a letter from her mother admonishing her that it would be advisable for her to return as soon as the weather warmed up. Persons were criticising her husband and her bosom friend, who were seen constantly together. Edith was amused that observers should have been so deceived by her plan for Ralph's protection.

There came an anonymous letter repeating the advice already given. Men usually consider anonymous letters better fitted for the wastebasket than for consideration. A woman is likely to be more favorably disposed to heed what is spoken behind a mark. Edith began to feel a bit anxious. She still trusted her friend, but she feared for her husband. She began to doubt the wisdom of having exposed him to any woman, however saintly. She had not thought that her husband, once the scales had fallen from his eyes, would see Eunice's superiority to his wife.

Mrs. Tisdale went home with far more haste than she had come away. Before going to her house she went to Eunice's. If there was anything to be elicited she preferred to learn it from her friend. She was told at the door that Miss Cowles was not in the city.

Reluctantly she drove to her home. Ralph, whom she had advised of her coming, advanced to meet her with a welcoming smile and took her in his arms.

This was reassuring.

"How have you and Eunice agreed?" was her first question.

"Well. She has served me far more than you can imagine."

"Where has she gone?"

"I don't know."

"When will she return?"

"I don't know."

That was a happy dinner husband and wife ate together. Edith had been perturbed as to her friend having supplanted her in her husband's affections and did not mention her during the meal. For the first time she did not seem to need her.

Eunice never returned. In time Mrs. Tisdale began to wonder. But no explanation came. An explanation, consisting of certain notes, Ralph held under lock and key, but he never produced them. They had enabled him to get rid of his enemy.

Only Needed a Little Time.

We took Jean to get a pair of shoes, and after being fitted she was asked if they were comfortable. "Well, grandma," she said, "they are a little stiff in places, but I think they'll be all right after they get acquainted with my feet."—Chicago Tribune.

FARM POULTRY

DRY-MASH FEEDING FAVORED.

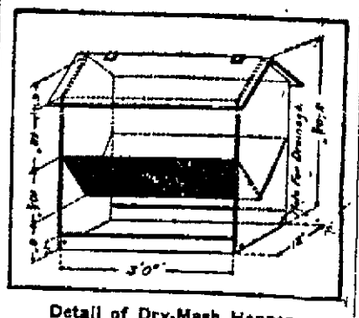

Poultry on Range Should Have Access to Supplemental Feed—Device to Prevent Waste.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The feeding of dry mash to farm poultry on range is not practiced as generally as it should be. Dry mash is compounded of finely ground grains, and usually contains some animal protein in the way of beef scrap, fish scrap, etc. This dry mash is intended to supplement the grain ration and to be an additional source of supply to the chickens on range.

Dry mash always accessible to poultry helps to promote a rapid and uniform growth and is economical. Poultry is not inclined to overeat of dry mash. The usual method of feeding wet or moist mashes, however, unless care is taken, is wasteful and dangerous. Poultry will overeat of wet mash, and this mash spoils quickly if not consumed, particularly in hot weather.

The feeding of dry mash, on the other hand, also may be wasteful if a properly designed device for feeding is not employed. The following device is an efficient and economical feeder and may easily be constructed.

This hopper is constructed of inch boards 12 inches wide. The top may be hinged for convenience in filling, or the entire top may be made removable, affording in this case better protection from the weather. The V-shaped bottom of the food container is made of one-fourth-inch square-mesh wire, such as is used in rendering corn cribs and grain bins rat proof. The flat tray, above which the food container is supported by the end boards, should have drainage holes. Wooden cleats should be fastened along the point of contact of the wire mesh with the end boards, thus making a closed joint and preventing waste.

A substantial advantage in this form of food hopper will be found in that it gives no opportunities for the wedging in and smothering of young chickens, when crowding around the feeder.

PICK HIGH-PRODUCING FOWLS

Paleness of Shank Is Very Reliable Indication—Also Birds With Pliable Combs.

(By W. A. LIPPINCOTT, Kansas Agricultural Experiment Station.)

It is not only possible but desirable to pick out the high-producing hens in the flock by means of external characteristics.

Hens that molt late are high producers, because they have a longer period in which to lay. Late molting is the accompaniment of late laying, but the mere fact of late molting does not make high producers. The hens that molt late begin laying as early as the early molters, because they molt much more rapidly and lose less time.

In the yellow-skinned breeds the paleness of shank is a very reliable indication in the fall at the end of the first year. The high producers lay the color out of their shanks, and so any bird that still has yellow shanks after a year of laying likely has been a poor producer for that year.

Those birds with soft and pliable combs about October 1 are in general better producers than those with hard and dried-up combs. As a bird molts the comb tends to shrink and become hard, but birds in good condition and laying have pliable combs.

SEPARATE MALES FROM HENS

When Breeding Season Is Over Infertile Eggs Are Most Desirable—Best for Keeping.

When the breeding season is over the roosters and young cockerels should be separated from the hens. Infertile eggs are wanted then, so there is no reason for keeping male birds with the flock.

There are several reasons why infertile eggs are not wanted to use or to sell, the principal being that the infertile eggs keep longer and are more wholesome for food.

AVOID FEEDING RICH FOODS

Too Much Beef Scrap or Grain of One Kind Will Upset Digestion and Cause Trouble.

Feeding too rich food, like too much beef scrap or too much of any one grain, will upset the digestion and cause trouble.

A well-balanced, varied ration is cheapest and most profitable to feed.

MISS MANSFIELD

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Barradale was not able to get a vacation till October. On the 10th he went to a house a mile distant from a village, a house where they took summer boarders. The only other person there was a girl of nineteen. Who she was did not appear. She was not a member of the family. She did not reside there regularly. She spent most of the day in her room, but what she did there was not made known to Barradale.

One morning when Barradale started out for his accustomed morning walk his landlady, Mrs. Stetson, asked him if he happened to go by the postoffice to bring the mail, adding that he was to give any letters that might come to her and no one else. Barradale called for the mail and noticed that it consisted of two letters, both for Miss Mabel Mansfield. They were addressed in masculine handwriting. Miss Mansfield was the young lady boarder. Barradale delivered the letters to Mrs Stetson and thought no more about the matter.

Having nothing else to do, Barradale took long walks, stopping for long rests—that is, when the retreating summer got the better of the coming autumn and it was warm enough to sit still. On several occasions he passed the postoffice and always asked for the mail. There was usually a letter for Miss Mansfield, sometimes addressed in a woman's, sometimes in a man's handwriting. Miss Mansfield, weather permitting, took a walk in the afternoon. One afternoon, when Barradale had the mail in his pocket, he met her. Taking out the letters, he selected one for her, gave it to her and passed on. When he handed the other letters to Mrs. Stetson he mentioned that he had given one to Miss Mansfield. Mrs. Stetson frowned, but said nothing. The next day she told him that he need not trouble himself about the mail; she would get it herself. After that when he called at the postoffice he was given his own mail and no more.

There was no one in the house to interest Barradale except Miss Mansfield, and he longed to avail himself of her companionship. He noticed, however, that whenever he attempted to do so Mrs. Stetson thrust herself upon them. The consequence was that Barradale, noticing that Miss Mansfield walked in the afternoon, contrived to meet her and walk with her.

At first she demurred, saying that he was a stranger to her, and she was not used to the society of men. Girls should be very careful with whom they associate. However, she gradually thawed, and her prudish attitude did not prevent her from making appointments to meet him without the range of Mrs. Stetson's watchful eye.

Put a young man and a young woman under the same roof with no other associates, and the result is usually the same. When Barradale went home he had received Miss Mansfield's permission to call upon her mother—she had no father—who lived in the same city as himself, to ask for her hand. The evening after his arrival he made the call. The house was a stone front, and a dignified elderly lady received him.

"Mrs. Mansfield?" he asked.

"I am Mrs Mansfield."

"Mrs. Mansfield, I have been spending a month in the country, where I have met your daughter."

At this the lady became all attention.

"I found her a charming girl," continued Barradale—"indeed, so charming that I fell in love with her."

"Were you at Mrs. Stetson's?" asked the lady sharply.

"I was."

"Mrs Stetson assured me that her summer boarders had all returned to the city," snapped the lady.

Barradale was about to proceed with his application when Mrs. Mansfield broke in, talking partly to herself and partly to him.

"What shall I do with her? She's incorrigible. She got all the boys in the high school in love with her, and I packed her off to college to get her away from them. She had barely entered before she was expelled for breaking the rules. I managed to have the expulsion exchanged to suspension and rusticated her under the care of Mrs. Stetson. Mrs. Stetson has written me that Mabel has been getting letters from her lovers despite the fact that Mrs. Stetson has endeavored to intercept them. Did Mabel send you to me to ask for her?"

"She did."

"You are the seventh person she has sent to me to ask for her in the past six months. If I had known that a young man had gone to the same house in the country as she I would have warned him. Mrs. Stetson is very much to blame."

"No harm done, I assure you, Mrs. Mansfield," replied Barradale, outwardly unruffled. "I'm just of an age to cut my wisdom teeth. The experience will surely be of service to me."

"I wish you'd take her off my hands," said the lady ruefully. "The others have been boys; you are a man and might be able to control her."

"Thank you very much. Just at present I don't feel like relieving you, but when a man is once inoculated by a Cupid's arrow it's difficult to get the poison out of his system. Meanwhile I'll play her own game with her. I'll let her severely alone for awhile."

It so happened that Miss Mansfield had played the game once too often. She is now Mrs. Barradale.

Surprises in War.

In warfare the elements of "surprise" counts for a very great deal.

Troy would not have been captured by the Greeks had it not been for the surprise sprung upon the Trojans by the gigantic wooden horse in which Greek soldiers concealed themselves stealing out in the nighttime to open the gates of the city to the Greek army.

Pyrrhus would never have gained his victory over the Romans had he not brought his elephants into the field. These gigantic creatures as they plowed their way through the Roman ranks struck terror into the hearts of the soldiers who had never before engaged in a battle in which elephants took part.

Hannibal, the great Carthaginian general, would never have captured one of the chief Alpine passes had he not hit on the happy idea of fastening torches to the horns of 2,000 oxen, lighting the torches when it got dark and driving the beasts toward the Roman camp. Seeing the moving lights, the company guarding the pass thought their comrades were in danger and hastened to their rescue, thus leaving the way clear for Hannibal and his men to get through.—Pearson's.

That Old Sea Serpent.

Major O. Smith, an officer of the Swedish army, describes in Nature a sea serpent which he saw some time ago in the Baltic sea, near Stockholm. "At 2.25 p. m.," he writes, "we suddenly saw a movement of the water like the ripple of a wave less than 300 feet from us. The sea was calm and there was no boat or anything else that could cause such a movement. Looking more attentively, all of us saw very distinctly a head like that of an enormous serpent, larger than that of a man, slightly elongated, surmounting a serpentine body about seventy-five feet long. The creature was undulating, making at least ten distinct curves, and a large part of its posterior region was above the water. We watched this strange creature for more than a minute swimming at a speed of about two knots. I have seen many dolphins and whales, and I know their movements. Those of this sea serpent were very different."

A Way Criminals Have.

What is it that chains a man to the use of his real initials when he relies upon an assumed name to keep him from trouble or the penitentiary? In their recognition and analysis of this fact the shrewder detectives seem today one jump in advance of the sharpest crooks.

This persistence in writing the telltale initials has been the chief factor in the arrest of many notorious criminals.

"Some obscure mental habit holds them to the familiar characters of their signature," explained a detective. "They seem unable to get away from the letters their hands have been accustomed to form, not even when life and liberty depend on it."

Criminal history is full of testimony to this interesting psychological fact. And it is proving a big factor in running down the kings of crookdom.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Man the Hypocrite.

Man is a poor, weak biological specimen. He spends his life making good resolutions and formulating strict ethical codes for the guidance of himself and his fellows. These ethical codes, consisting in the main of restrictions upon his pleasure, he shouts from the housetops in the most public manner possible.

Hardly does he utter them, however, than he sets about in surreptitious ways to disregard them. Such is man. It is not so much that he leadeth a double life, but that he leadeth a single hypocritical life.—Life.

Wicked Pilot Snake.

The pilot snake is this country's boldest [illegible] robber, which, despite [illegible] that he is entirely nonvenomous [illegible] is not particularly desirable resident, especially to the mind of the blacksnake, resemblance between the two being so close that wickedness of the first frequently redounds to the discredit of the latter.

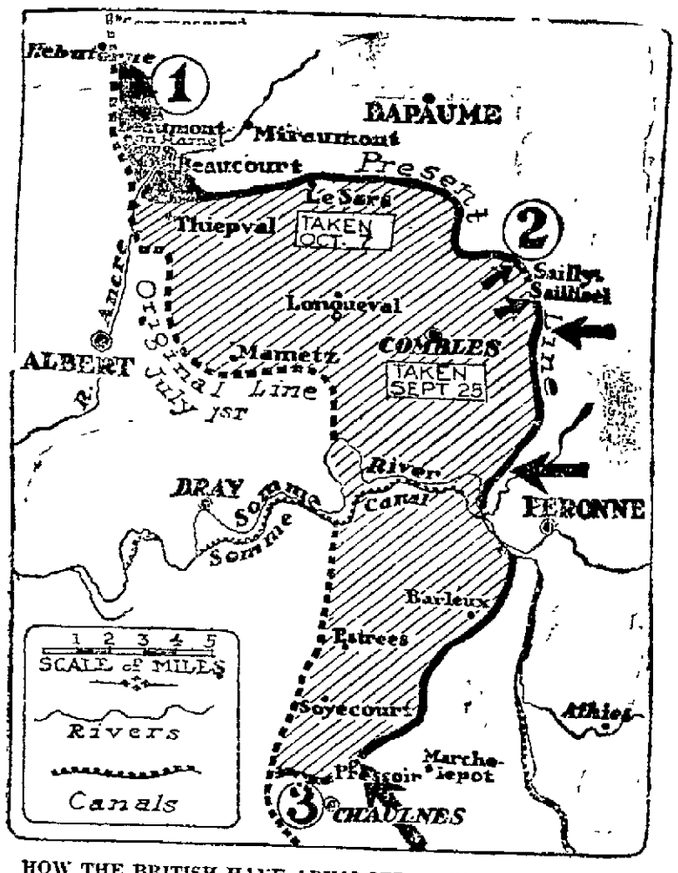

JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

ASTOR BABY IN SUIT TO RECOVER INCOME TAX.

(John Jacob Astor.)

New York, Nov 20.—Suit to recover $2,644 alleged to have been illegally collected in the form of an income tax from the estate of young John Jacob Astor was started by Mrs. Madeline T. Dick, mother of the son of the late John Jacob Astor, who was lost on the Titanic. Astor left $3,000,000 to his posthumous son and an income tax was collected from the estate in 1913. Mrs Dick has brought a test case, alleging her son had not received any benefit from his inheritance at that time.

Mrs Dick before her marriage to Col Astor was Miss Madeline T Force. She was with her husband on the Titanic and was rescued in the disaster which resulted fatally for him. Her son was born a few months later. She renounced a large share of the Astor estate to become the wife of William T. Dick.

HOW THE BRITISH HAVE ADVANCED IN SOMME REGION.

In this general view of the battlefield of the Somme, the numeral 1 and arrow mark the point of the new British offensive, which began on November 13, and has pushed in the German lines on both sides of the Ancre, it is announced, for more than a mile.

No. 2 marks the point where the latest French attacks have been answered by German counter-attacks, extending from Les Boeufs, northeast of Combles, to a point a little north of the Somme. No. 3 marks the direction of the opening of the German counter offensive, later extending to the north bank of the Somme. So far, Paris reports, the German counter-attacks have had only slight, local success.

Injury Plus Insult.

"Ah," sighed the aged suitor after the young widow had rejected him, "if I only had youth. But, alas! I can never be young again." "Quite true," she rejoined. "Nature sometimes makes mistakes, but she never repeats it with the same material."

Grave Danger, Indeed.

A judge was questioning an Irishman. "He caught you by the throat and choked you, did he?" asked the judge. "He did, yer worship," said Pat. "He squeezed me throat till I thought he would be making cider of me Adam's apple, sure!"

BROTHER SHOOTS SISTER ACCIDENTALLY

Little Olive Krom, 10 years old, is confined to her home on the Boulevard with a bullet in her ankle. She was accidently shot on Saturday by her brother, Harry, while he was shooting at a target in the back yard. The lad did not know his sister was out in the yard at the time, but thought she was in the house. Dr. Little was notified and attended to the wounded girl, who is resting as comfortably as can be expected.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES.

Three Poughkeepsie traffic officers have accepted gifts of $5 in gold each from Henry P. Kinkead, who leaves shortly for his winter home in San Bernardino, Cal.

William D. Ryan of Washington avenue has sold a Paige-Detroit touring car to Charles D. Clinton of Downs street.

The street department is repairing Abeel street by filling in numerous small ruts, a most commendable example of true efficiency and foresight in street maintenance.

It is said at Kingston post office that none of the rural carriers will take advantage of the new rule permitting the use of motorcycles in covering the route. According to some of the men the motorcycles are not suited to the work in spite of their speed.

Off For France.

The New York papers of Sunday gave a most interesting account of the departure of five Harlemites for France. These five sturdy young men sailed on the Espagne on Saturday and will join either the French Red Cross or the aviation corps. Among the group was George Schultz, nephew of Mrs. Theresa Weber of this city, and who is well known in Kingston. At first it was thought that Mr. Schultz was going as a German spy, because of his name, but it was soon made plain that not only he, but his grandfather who recently died in New York city, were native born Americans, and very loyal at that. A large number of people accompanied the men to the steamer wishing them God speed on their undertaking and a safe return.

Traffic Was Blocked.

This morning a large truck loaded with lumber broke down on lower Hasbrouck avenue holding up traffic on the Colonial line for nearly an hour. The truck had too big a load and the wheels broke under the weight. The lumber is being carted from the U. & D. yard to Dwyer Brothers' boatyard. Fortunately Policeman P. J. White was nearby or traffic would have been held longer and it was through following his directions as to the proper way to load the timber of the broken truck onto another wagon that the work was hurried. Officer White has probably handled as much timber and knows as much about the proper way to load a wagon as any man in Ulster county.

ST. JOHN'S WILL MAKE A CANVASS

Laymen to Assist the Rev. J. I. Blair Larned in "Every Member" Canvass Begun This Week—Loyalty to Christ Calls for Self Sacrifice, Declares Rector in Sermon.

At the regular morning service at St. John's Episcopal Church on Wall street on Sunday, the rector, the Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, made announcement regarding the proposed "Every Member Canvass" to be carried on by the church, beginning this week. Mr. Larned announced that the laymen of the church had organized the canvass and that the first official letter giving full information regarding the canvass would reach the parishioners on Wednesday of this week. The records of church communicants and regular attendants had been carefully gone over in the effort to have a letter reach every such member, but since there might be errors in so large a list, Mr. Larned asked that if any parishioner failed to receive his or her letter on Wednesday, he or she would notify C. V. A. Decker, the chairman of the canvass, in order that the following letters as well as the first one might reach them.

During the next three weeks, the church from both pulpit and pew will prepare for the campaign, which will be primarily and emphatically in the interest of a more regular and devoted attendance upon the church services. While regular contributing, no matter how small the sum, will be appreciated as the only right way of supporting the church, the real object is the increased loyalty to Christ and His church. With this end in view, Mr. Larned preached on Sunday morning on "Loyalty to Jesus Christ, the Foundation of Self Sacrifice." Next Sunday will be "Missionary" Sunday, and the following Sunday, December 10, will be "Go to Church" Sunday, the day of the actual canvass. All of the men of the church are enthusiastically entering upon the work of the canvass under the captaincy of the following men: Hon. George Washburn, H. R. King, W. Babcock, Thomas Horton, Louis Kegler, S. L. Drake and Dr. Behrens.

Mr. Larned took for the text of his morning sermon, II Samuel, XIV, 24: "Neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which doth cost me nothing." "Could all self sacrifice be a foolish waste?" The preacher proved to the contrary. He showed how every one comes into the world with a twofold ancestry: that from the brute world whereby he inherits the "getting" instinct; and that from the spiritual world, whereby he inherits the "giving" instinct. It was shown that the first had its rightful place as well as the second, but that the one needed curbing and the other developing. Both could best be accomplished through loyalty to Jesus Christ.

Loyalty calls for self sacrifice. Patriotism, that loyalty next noblest to the loyalty to Christ, is not the waving of flags, the shouting of songs, the struggle to gain territory or to overcome a weaker nation, but that self sacrifice which cheerfully pays the taxes called for; and if ones country is dishonored or ones flag be smirched, which offers ones life if necessary to regain one's country's honor or defend the flag. Loyalty to Christ is higher yet in its ideals: wider in its scope, covering not one nation, but all peoples of all times; and deeper in that it means companionship with Christ and an outreach into eternity for its fulfilling. The sacrifice which bespeaks such loyalty is threefold: Willing in that it is offered in love and never coerced; unobtrusive, in that the very giving of one's life to Christ in the daily living would seem almost to be desecrated by any ostentation; constant, in that the self sacrifice must be offered daily, not now and then when one is spurred to meet some great occasion.

Mr. Larned closed his sermon with relating the story of the army officer who attended one of John B. Gough's lectures and was deeply moved thereby. When the time came that those present, willing to sign and keep the pledge were asked to rise, the army officer sprang to his feet. Sitting next to him was a physician, who tried to pull him down, telling him that to do such a thing would be to risk his life. The army officer replied, "Sir, I have many times risked my life for my country, shall I do less for my heavenly King?"

Such a spirit of loyalty to Christ made manifest in St. John's Church would, the preacher knew, make for the closely knit unity of the church; its wider vision and nobler service to mankind in the community.

The young people who are well esteemed received a number of very beautiful gifts. After a short wedding trip the young people will go to their new home at Ohioville.

The Coterie.

The meeting of The Coterie held on Saturday at the home of Miss Mabel Hale was an unusually interesting one. "Havana" was the subject for the day, and Mrs. Brown had the first paper on "Havana, the Key to the New World." After describing the appearance of the city as one enters its harbor, its natural beauties, etc., Mrs. Brown gave a vivid description of Havana of early days, with its quaint Spanish architecture and surroundings, and then of the Havana of today, which is exceedingly modern in everything but its streets which are very narrow. The wonderful Parada and public buildings and the magnificent homes of the wealthy citizens were also depicted. The romance of the founding of the beautiful theatre was told and many other anecdotes and traditions gave a very human interest to the paper. Mrs. Weyant had the second paper, her topic being "Havana's Fortifications and Churches." The more formidable of these forts, El Punta, El Moro, La Fuera and Cabanya were described as to appearance. Then not only their history, but the part which they played in the history of the United States was cleverly interwoven. Among the many churches pictured were the "Little Temple," and the Columbus Cathedral. And again romance played a notable part in the telling. In both papers which were exceptionally full of interest, mate was taken of the Spanish-American war and the greatly improved conditions arising since that period. Another feature which added realism to the afternoon, was the presentation of many fine water colors and postals, shown by Mrs. Terry, who had visited Havana. The program closed with a reading "An Oration on the Sinking of the Maine," given by Mrs. Fleming, and was followed by a delightful social hour. The next meeting of this club will be with Mrs. Terry.

Evidently Knew Them Both.

The bishop took a personal interest in all his servants, and, happening to pass the new maid on his way through the back hall to the stables one day, he stopped to speak to her. "Well, child," he said, "and where are you?" "If you please, my lord," the maid replied, with a curtsy, "between the cook and the housemaid." "Heaven help you!" said the bishop, after a moment's thought, and went on his way.

A tablet in memory of the church's most faithful worker was unveiled at 10 o'clock by Mrs. McBride and the Rev. George M. Cranston delivered a few remarks. Dr. Frank MacDaniel, president of the Pennington Seminary, New Jersey, preached the sermons at both the morning and evening services to audiences which taxed the capacity of the church. The church choir under the leadership of Prof. Arthur Snyder, organist, sang at both services and were aided by the Wilson brothers, violinists.

Of the total cost of $4,800 about $1,800 had been previously raised and this sum was augmented by promises of $1,700 pledged at Sunday's services.

Chamber Needs Furnishings.

In connection with the opening of headquarters for its expansion campaign the Chamber of Commerce would like the use of some typewriters, tables, chairs and rugs.

(By La Raconteuse).

A lovely dance frock for the debutante is developed here in flesh colored meteor, fashioned on extremely simple lines. The cunning jumper bodice with its outlined edge of fur is extremely becoming on the young girl. The double tier of pointed web serves beautifully as sleeves, for usually the young girl nneeds this bit of softness. Especially interesting is the apron tunic with its edge of fur.

PROBABLE FOOD DICTATORS OF ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

(Lord Milner and Ex-President Fallieres).

With the announcement that England will soon have a food controller and that France has taken steps to eliminate all wastage, the two principal nations of the Entente grop have joined Germany and Austria-Hungary in tightening the strings that control national resources in preparation, apparently, for a long drawn out struggle. All Europe now is combating the menace of a food shortage.

Lord Milner has held many high offices in the British Empire, among them Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, Governor of the Transvall, Under-Secretary for Finance in Egypt and High Commissioner from South Africa. It is said that his appointment is practically certain.

Former President Armand Fallieres of France, it is said, has selected a national board which will have supervision over foodstuffs, coal, etc., in an effort to stop waste by compelling economy. The board will be invested with large powers.

MUSIC IN THE NAMES.

Stevenson and the Tuneful Nomenclature of This Country.

To our house in Monterey Mr. Stevenson came often of an afternoon to read the results of his morning's work to the assembled family. While we sat in a circle, listening in appreciative silence, he nervously paced the room, reading aloud in his full, sonorous voice—a voice that always seemed remarkable in so frail a man—his face flushed and his manner rather embarrassed, for, far from being overconfident about his work, he always seemed to feel a sort of shy anxiety lest it should not be up to the mark.

In this way we heard "The Pavilion on the Links," which he wrote while at Monterey and read to us chapter by chapter as they came from his pen. While there he began another story which was to have been called "Arizona Breckinridge; or, a Vendetta In the West." This story, with its rather lurid title, was to have been based upon some of his impressions of western America, but his heart could not have been in it, for it was never finished.

The name Arizona came out of his intense delight in the "songful, tuneful" nomenclature of the United States, in which terms he refers to it in "The Amateur Emigrant." The name Susquehanna was a special joy to him, and he took pleasure in rolling it upon his tongue, adding to its music with the rich tones of his voice as he repeated it: "Susquehanna! Oh, beautiful!" While on the train passing through Pennsylvania he wrote some verses about the beautiful river with the "tuneful" name in a letter to his friend, Sidney Colvin, of which one stanza runs thus:

I think, I hope, I dream no more
The dreams of otherwhere,
The cherished thoughts of yore,
I have been changed from what I was before,
And drunk too deep perchance the lotus of the air
Beside the Susquehanna and along the Delaware.

Again, in writing the poem entitled "Ticonderoga," it was the name that first drew his attention, and

It sang in his sleeping ears;
It hummed in his waking head.
The name—Ticonderoga.

CRUISING UNDER WATER.

Submarines Are Light Moving and Are Easily Controlled.

Ashore we make the mistake perhaps of thinking of a submarine as a heavy, logy body fighting always for her life beneath an unfriendly ocean, whereas she is a light moving, easily controlled creature cruising in a rather friendly element.

The ocean is always trying to lift her atop and not hold her under water. A submarine could be sent under with a positive buoyance so small—that is, with so little more than enough in her tanks to sink her—that an ordinary man standing on the sea bottom could catch her as she came floating down and bounce her up and off merely by the strength of his arms. Consider a submarine under water as we would a toy balloon in the air, say. Weight that toy balloon so that it just falls to earth. Kick that toy balloon and what does it do? Doesn't it bounce along and after a few feet fall easily down again and up and on and down again?

Picture a strong wind driving that toy balloon along the street and the baloon as it bumps along meeting an obstacle. Will the balloon smash itself against the obstacle or what will it do? What that balloon does is pretty much what a submarine would do if while running along full speed under water she suddenly ran into shoal water. She would go bumping along on the bottom and meeting an obstacle, if not too high, she would be more likely to bounce over it than to smash herself against it.—Collier's.

The Streets of Amsterdam.

Amsterdam, in Holland, a city of ten miles in circumference, is mostly built on piles driven into the sandy subsoil, but the flowing of the tide and the debris of the Amstel river have made ninety islands, and the city has more canals than streets. The watery ways are traversed by over 300 bridges, so that Amsterdam has earned the designation of the Venice of the North.

Women on the Stage.

The earliest mention of actresses was in 1611, when Coryat in his "Crudities" gave this description of a production at the Theater of Venice, Italy: "I saw women act, a thing I never saw before. They performed with as good a grace, action, gesture, as ever I saw any masculine actor."

DAYTON MURRAY MADE SECRETARY

At Rondout Savings Bank to Succeed the Late L. L. Osterhoudt—Herbert Hall Appointed Bookkeeper.

Osterhoudt. Mr. Murray's many friends will be pleased to learn of his promotion as he is eminently well qualified to fill the position. Mr. Murray is succeeded as bookkeeper by Herbert Hall, who has been cashier of the Wallkill National Bank. Mr. Hall assumes his duties the first of the month. He is a former resident of this city, and a son-in-law of the late Mr. Osterhoudt.

WAR AT A GLANCE

The Allies' victory at Monastir, in Macedonia, was pushed into the background today by advices from Rumania. The outlook for the salvation of Rumania is blacker than it has been at any other time since the armies of von Falkenhayn and von Mackensen began their double drive in September.

Powerful thrusts within the past forty-eight hours have driven the Austro-German lines nearly fifty miles into the western part of Rumania.

Austro-German forces have cut the Orsova-Craiova railroad, the only railway line running through Rumania from the east to west. This advance menaces the Rumanian army on the line stretching along the Danube in a southeasterly direction from Orsova and will probably compel its retreat. A retirement of this force will open the way for a brand new invasion of Rumania from Bulgaria, my way of Vidin or Rahova.

The progress of the Austro-Germans in northeastern Rumania is much more difficult. The Rumanians and Russians have massed the bulk of their armies in in that zone to prevent Rumania being cut off from Russia. But a decisive victory in that sphere will not be necessary if the Teutons keep up their swift progress across the Rumanian Plain. An advance across this stretch of level ground in Central Rumania will put the Austro-Germans in the rear of the armies in the Carpathians and the Eastern ranges of the Transylvanian Alps, compelling them to flee.

Heavy battles continue on the Somme front in France. The Allies are keeping up their drive on Bapaume, but with a small degree of success. Berlin dwells upon the severity of the Allies' losses there.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 20.—Stocks were in liberal supply at the opening of the stock exchange today and although commisssion house buying was effective in causing some advances in the initial dealings recessions were quickly in order after the first few minutes' trading. Steel Common rose ¾ to a new high record, 127, but quickly reacted to 126½. There was heavy trading in Utah Copper, which started ½ down at 128½, advancing to 129¾, from which it declined to 127½. Similar movements were noted in American Smelting, Chile Copper and Granby. The last named stock opened up 3 points at 118, and then reacted to 117. Lackawanna Steel advanced 1½ to 105¾, and Baldwin Locomotive ¾ to 87¼. Kennicott Copper maintained its strong tone all through the early trading, advancing ⅞ to 64¼. Union Pacific started ¼ higher at 148¼, from which it declined to 147½. At the end of the first fifteen minutes the buying orders continued in large volume and recoveries from the lowest prices were noted in many stocks.

Heavy buying orders appeared in Steel Common in the late afternoon, three houses taking 50,000 shares of that stock, causing an advance to 129¼. Interest was then diverted to the railway issues, Reading becoming active and strong, advancing two points to 110¼. Gains of around a point were made in Union Pacific, Great Western, New York Central and Lehigh Valley.

The market closed irregular. Steel Common and the railway shares were in brisk demand all through the last hour. There was good buying of the railway issues at the high levels established early in the day. American Writing Paper Preferred was the strongest of the specialties, advancing over a point to 74¾. Government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds irregular.

Quotations furnished by John D. Kline Warren Building Fair street, Kingston, N. Y., Tel. 1423. Correspondent of C. H. Van Buren & Company, members of Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York.

Powerful Effect.

"The people who preach economy for others sometimes have to turn in and practice economy for themselves," said a railroad man. "I once asked a business man:

"'Well, George, did you read your wife that lecture on economy you said you were going to?'

"'Yep,' George grunted, with a gesture of disgust.

"'Have any effect?' said I.

"'It sure did,' said George. 'I've bought myself a safety razor, cut out cigars in favor of a pipe and had last season's suit cleaned so as to make it see me through this year.'"—Washington Star.

The Millennium Will Come:

When rulers have learned to sacrifice personal ambition for the lives and happiness of their subjects.

When the rich cease to extort from the community the necessaries of life.

When patriotism inspires the maker of laws and the subject of laws.

When the strong help the weak.

When every one's motto is, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you."

When history ceases to repeat itself.—Life.

Skin Grafting Not New.

The transplantation of bits of skin to cover injured parts was practiced by the Hindus ages ago. It was rediscovered in comparatively recent times and has proved a great blessing to mankind. It is now held that the transplanted skin does not actually take root, but is used by the body as a basis for growing its own new skin.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke)

New York, Nov. 20.—And now that the University of Pittsburgh threatens to duplicate its unbeaten record of 1915, some totally unfair sport writers and football "experts" are trying to classify it among the western colleges.

That's a little subterfuge to prevent them from awarding the eastern championship to some college other than Yale, Harvard or Princeton. There is a certain clique of narrow minded folks who spoof the doings of every eleven other than the "Big Three" and who begrudge even a few words of praise for any college other than Yale, Harvard or Princeton.

But the trick won't work this year. Pittsburgh, geographically, is an eastern city; the college belongs nowhere except in the east. All its gridiron foes are easterners. And so, if Pitt should keep its record unsullied until the end of the season, it must be accorded the undisputed championship, unless some other major eleven also goes through the year without suffering a setback.

The Panthers have come forward with such an amazing rush in the football world during the past three seasons that they are the collegiate sensations. Nothing like their meteoric rise has even been seen before. And because of this, some biased critics look upon them as "fluke" performers.

What Pitt Has Done.

Is it a fluke to do what Pitt has done? It has gone through two seasons without suffering defeat. In the last three years it has been beaten but once. And in that time it has played Cornell, Pennsylvania (twice), Syracuse, Navy (twice) Carlisle, Washington & Jefferson (three times) Penn State (twice) Georgetown, Westminister (three times) Allegheny, Carnegie Tech.

Why hasn't it played Yale, Harvard or Princeton. For the simple reason, gentle peruser, that none of them will give Pitt a game. Pitt wants to play each and every one of them—has begged for the chance. But it has been denied. They play "safe" in Yale and Harvard and Princeton. They won't schedule games with teams that looks too good.

And Pitt—so say all those who have seen the eleven in action this year—has the most powerful eleven in America.

Aren't All-Americans.

And as it is in ranking the elevens, so it has been in the past in naming members for the mythical all-American elevens. Some folks are so mediaeval in their thoughts that they still believe star players can come from only Yale, Harvard or Princeton. Rarely does that crowd concede that a whirlwind player on another eastern eleven, or on a western team, is as good or better than the Yale, Harvard or Princeton performers.

Their slogan has been:

"If he doesn't belong to Yale or Harvard or Princeton he isn't any good. And if he belongs to Yale, or Harvard or Princeton, he's all right."

"Big Three" Lacks Stars.

After seeing Yale, Harvard and Princeton in action so far this year, it is our humble opinion that not one of those elevens has a backfield man whose all year doings entitle him to a place on the first or second All-American Elevens. But you'll find a few there when you look over the "fair" selections of that coterie of "experts."

Pollard, of Brown; Hastings, of Pittsburgh; Gerrish, of Dartmouth; Hubbell, of Colgate; Oliphant, of Army; McLaren, of Pittsburgh; Thielscher, of Dartmouth, Shweiek, of Cornell; Hillhouse, of Brown—each and every one is a better all around backfield man than we have seen operating this season for any of the "Big Three."

But watch where they'll land when the clique of fogies begin dealing out their All-Eastern and All-American halfbacks and quarterbacks.

OPINION IN O'REILLY CASE

City Wins Suit for Taxes That Was Begun in 1904 and That Has Long Dragged Through the Courts.

The opinion of the appellate division of the supreme court unanimously affirming the judgment and order of Judge Cochrane in favor of the City of Kingston in the suit brought against the City by Mrs. Cecelia B. O'Reilly has been received.

The facts are stated at length in the opinion of the court, which was written by Presiding Justice Kellogg and concurred in by Judges Howard, Lyons and Woodward. Judge N. Frank O'Reilly represented his mother in the proceeding with Judge John G. Van Etten, of counsel; Corporation Counsel William D. Brinnier represented the city.

Judge Kellogg's opinion is as follows.

This action was brought to remove a cloud upon the plaintiff's title to certain real estate, arising from an assessment made by the city for local improvements. The defendant's council authorized the improvements and directed that they be made by contract and that twenty-five per cent of the cost of the work be paid by a general tax upon the city and that seventy-five per cent be defrayed by special assessment upon the property benefited. Pursuant to public notice bids were received and the plaintiff's son was successful bidder and received a contract for the work upon his furnishing a bond with satisfactory surety conditioned for the faithful performance of the work. Plaintiff became the surety for her son and her bond was accepted and the contract awarded him and he performed the work and received payment therefor. The city authorities levied the assessment and the plaintiff, by certiorari, claimed that the assessment against her property was invalid on account of certain irregularities in the manner in which it was levied. In People ex rel O'Reilly, 189 N. Y., 66, the assessment was vacated, the court saying at page 74: "We are therefore constrained to reverse the order of the appellate division and set aside the assessment. While the law requires this adjudication, the result will be unjust if the relator should escape taxation altogether, for her property upon Andrew street and Mary's avenue is apparently benefited more than all the other property upon those streets taken together. The city however, may have a remedy, for if the legislature in the first place could have authorized everything to be done as in fact it has been done, a curative act may be passed which will prevent the injustice of throwing the entire expense of these useful improvements upon the city at large."

Thereafter, by Chapter 705 of the Laws of 1907, the Curative Act suggested by the court of appeals was passed and a re-assessment was made to cover the amount to be paid by the property owners for the improvements, and the plaintiff now brings this action asking that the said assessment be declared invalid as a cloud upon her title. In the former action the fact that she was the surety upon the bond of the son, which enabled him to obtain the contract, was of no importance, for the assessment to be valid must be made pursuant to the forms of law. But here the plaintiff's property has been benefited by the work; her son had the benefit of the contract and obtained that benefit by virtue of the bond, and she now, in a court of equity, seeks to avoid payment for the benefits received by her on the ground that the city had no right to have the work performed. She contends that at the time the contract was made the indebtedness of the city was more than ten per cent of the assessed valuation of the real property and that therefore the city had no real power to contract a further debt. It would be a reproach to our law if the son, the contractor, could avoid a tax levied against his property on account of the moneys paid to him under the contract. His property would be benefited by it and he would have the profits from performing the contract and would escape liability upon the ground that the city was without power to make the contract. Evidently the mother, his surety, is in no better position to raise that question than her son would be. They are effectually stopped from the claim that the city had no power to make the contract.

In a technical sense it is true that if a city buys a broom to sweep out the mayor's office, or hose for the engine house, a liability is incurred, as the vendor is required to submit his bill for audit after the goods are furnished and the city receives the goods before the money is paid. But the constitutional provision must have a sane and reasonable interpretation. It was not made to tie up a city and render it impossible for it to carry on its ordinary functions, but was intended to make the people who incur the debt pay it and to prevent the mortgaging of the future for present enjoyments. The resolution in question clearly contemplates that no permanent indebtedness of over ten per cent of the real estate valuation is to exist against the city. Twenty-five per cent of the cost was to go into the next tax levy the balance to be assessed against the property. The future was not to be mortgaged in any way. Section 10 of Article 8 of the Constitution which prohibits a city from becoming indebted in any manner to an amount which, excluding existing indebtedness, shall exceed ten per cent of the assessed valuation of is real estate, provides: "This section shall not be construed to prevent the issuing of certificates of indebtedness or revenue bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes for amounts actually contained or to be contained in the taxes for the year when such certificate or revenue bonds are issued and payable out of such taxes." It then provides that if the certificate of indebtedness or revenue bonds are not retired within five years, they shall thereafter be treated, for the purpose of the section, as a part of the indebtedness. The fair inference from this provision is that the section does not apply to obligations incurred which are to be met by the current tax levy. The fact that twenty-five per cent of the cost of the work was to be paid by the current tax levy and the balance assessed against the property, shows that no debt was created or intended to be created within the meaning of the constitutional provision. The debt referred to in the constitution is one which mortgages the future and which must be paid by taxation in future years. It does not relate to obligations incurred in the ordinary way which are to be paid by the current tax levy or presently charged upon the property owners benefited. If an obligation is to be met by funds on hand or by a tax in process of collection or about to be collected, it is not within the constitutional provision. The improvement was made; the plaintiff's property was benefited and the money was actually paid to her son at her request and pursuant to her bond for the faithful performance by him of his contract with the city.

We therefore conclude that the contract made between the city the plaintiff and her son for these improvements did not create a debt within the constitutional provision and that the plaintiff cannot now be heard to allege the invalidity of the contract made with the city, the benefits of which have been received in the manner which she contemplated when he made the contract. The judgment should therefore be affirmed, with costs.
